

What your Denturist needs you to know about: Full Dentures

A significant number of people are missing all of their natural teeth. If you're a member of this group and have decided to seek denture treatment, you should know that you can consult your Denturist, the Denture Specialist, directly and without a referral.

Looking Natural

Full denture treatment can go a long way to restoring a natural look, as well as your ability to chew properly. Well-made and accurately fitted dentures boost the wearer's self-confidence. Current techniques can produce truly natural looking dentures.

As full dentures depend on the health and size of the gums that support them, it's important to have your mouth assessed from time to time to ensure that your dentures still work properly. For those with very sensitive gums, often, when a substantial amount of gum has receded, there are techniques and options that can enhance comfort and help to maximize the remaining gum. Improve your denture-wearing experience—you deserve it.

You Are Unique

It is important to realize that every denture-wearing experience is unique. Your Denturist will clearly explain the conditions that exist in your mouth and outline the best technique or approach for maximizing the experience by taking those unique characteristics into account.

Remember, you may consult your Denturist directly and without referral. If you are about to lose teeth or your existing set of dentures is five or more years old...
